Deep Cuckoo.

The man with the opal set eaves a sigh, uncrosses his legs, recrosses them the other way and again buries his chin in his hand.

"What are you thinking about?" asks the man with the opal scarfpin and the trusting face.

"I can't decide it," replies the other. "I've been trying to figure out which is the most embarrassing: To meet some one you have forgotten and to pretend that you remember him, or to meet some one you remember and try to pretend that you have forgotten him."

"It's such a case," replies the man with the opal scarfpin. "I should get across the street."

Title of Novels.

Title of novels are seldom novel, as they ring the changes on the subject of work, keeping the grot tone leading. Just as every musical comedy for years was about some girl or other. You will look down the new lists of novels, and there is always a note as the keynote of the title. The "House with the Seven Gables" no longer suggested the vogue. The "House with the Green Shutters" brought it into fashion. And now we have been houses of everything an ingenious writer can think of.

Laughter, Silence—and the last is the "House of Souls." The novelist is as superstitious as the actor, and believes that the occurrence of "Elizabeth" or "House" in his title spells fortune. We long for a book with "Jane" or "Bathroom" on the cover!

TRAINING UP A HUSBAND.

Authority Gives Advice to Brides Which Need Not Be Followed Too Literally.

A great many bridegrooms are like jelly. It is only when they begin to grow cold that they become set in their ways, says a writer in Good Housekeeping. It is always wise, therefore, for the bride to remember this and while there is yet time, to mold him into the proper form for future husband.

I would admonish all brides, therefore, to obey their own blind instincts and to train up their husbands in the way they should go. More men thinks he knows something and he is inclined to act upon this fatal assumption too often.

The bride, however, does not know—she divines, and she should hold him sternly fast to her intuition, selecting for him the things that he needs—or doesn't—feeding him on the things that are good for him—or are not—taking him to the places where he is anxious to go—or isn't—and, in short, doing for him all the things that he likes—or doesn't like—in the firm assurance that her own sweet incomptent is by far the best guide.

Admiral Farragut says he used to be guided by a still, small voice which told him what to do in battles.

The empress of China, King Menelik of Abyssinia, the sultan of Afghanistan, the sultans of Morocco and Zanzibar and the khedive of Egypt, all maintain official astrologers.

It requires a lot of strenuous will power for a girl of 25 to act as if she didn't care to get married.

Tell a woman about a year after marriage that she might have done better and she will not deny it.
